

YOUNG MINDS

A Conference on Philosophy and Marginalized Identities

FACHBEREICH
PHILOSOPHIE

+++ Call for Abstracts +++

Are you a student of philosophy looking to gain experience presenting your work in an academic environment? Apply now to present at our student conference on May 10, 2024, at the University of Hamburg!

Why this conference? We want to create a space for (future) philosophers from marginalized groups to present their work and exchange ideas. In addition to three guest speakers on the topic of the conference, eight students will have the chance to give a 20-minute lecture (in German or English) followed by a Q&A session.

The content of your talk can be any philosophical topic – whether that be practical or theoretical philosophy, feminist philosophy or formal logic. Contributions on the topic of marginalization are welcome as well. Maybe you have a term paper you are proud of or another philosophical topic you are passionate about? We would be happy if you share your ideas with us!

How do you apply?

Until December 31, 2023, you can use this link to fill in all necessary personal information and upload a PDF describing...

...what's your motivation to apply and how you belong to a marginalized group (e.g., as a woman and/or trans person, POC, first-generation graduate, person with disability or chronic illness, member of the LGBTQIA+ community, etc.) (approx. 150-300 words).

... and what your talk will be about incl. your theses and your argumentation (approx. 500-800 words).
